DAVID LEWIS, C.C., Q.C. 1909-1981
Distinguished Canadian statesman who championed the cause of social justice and the rights of the working man.

A Tribute delivered at his funeral

by Kalmen Kaplansky

David touched our lives in so many wonderful ways. We admired the symmetry and the logic of his life's work. At no time was there a basic conflict between his personal and public life; between his Jewish origin and his dream of Canada; between the good of Canada and a world of justice and of freedom.

Where did he find the inner strength, the moral fiber to keep faith in the face of so much adversity?

Originally, in the world of his father, a man of impeccable integrity. It was there that he first learned the basics of his ethical and political credo; about the supremacy of public weal over private gain; about the unbreakable link between worthwhile objectives and the means to achieve them; about politics as a noble commitment, a cause and not a career. It was there, too, in the Jewish Workers' Union (der Yiddisher Arbeiter Bund) and during the early trade union struggles of Jewish immigrant workers in Montreal for dignity and for economic justice, that he first heard the Yiddish words of the "sacred pledge" — the "Shvua" — written some 75 years ago (mir shveren, mir shveren, a shvua funn blut un funn freren). In words sanctified, in their words, by "blood and by tears", they pledged to remain faithful to all "who toil and who are poor". David remembered this pledge.

He was universally recognized as the leader and inspiration of social democracy in Canada and abroad. But he also helped hundreds of the holocaust survivors to settle in Canada; he remained to the very end deeply concerned about Israel, and particularly its labour and socialist sector; he loved and cherished Yiddish, the language of his childhood, taking every opportunity to speak it in public and in private.

His greatest gift to us was his refusal to give in, to succumb to cynicism and to despair. There, too, he was at one with the marching hymn of the Jewish partisans of the last war, which he heard on so many occasions, who, while facing insurmountable odds, nevertheless defiantly proclaimed (zog nit kein mol az du gayst dem letsten veg) "never say that this is the final journey; the hour of fulfilment will still be ours".

But it was the family, in the final analysis, its unity and cohesion, which was his greatest source of pride, support and comfort to the very last. Sophie, Stephen, Michael, Janet and Nina — each in his or her own distinct way, unique in our political life — were as one in their remarkable dedication to his life's goals. To them, to his sister Doris and to their children — our friendship and our love.

Close to forty years ago, David and Frank Scott, on the inside cover of their book "Make This Your Canada", quoted the words of the martyred socialist leader of France, Jean Jaurès, "Take from the altars of the past the fire, not the ashes." David respected the ashes; but he also nurtured the fire with care, with piety, with stubborn dedication, with personal sacrifice. For that, we are forever grateful.

Hillel Lodge drive has promising start

The Ottawa Jewish Home for the Aged or Hillel Lodge as it is better known, has launched a public campaign to raise funds to retire an accumulated debt which is now in excess of $100,000.

In a letter appeal sent to every home in the Jewish community last week, Campaign Chairman William Grossman said:

"Not since 1965, when we first opened the doors to Hillel Lodge, have we been forced to seek your financial help. Now we must raise at least $100,000. to retire our outstanding operating deficit or be faced with a bleak future.

"Government subsidization does not meet our financial needs", he continued. "As a matter of fact, their grants fall short of the per diem operating cost for a kosher Home for the Aged. Inflation has also had its effect on food costs, salaries and everything else associated with the operation. Residents require and receive the care and attention they need — and it costs money.

"We have studied and analyzed our position and have implemented some systems which will result in financial savings but we cannot cut corners in the care of our residents."

Mr. Grossman concludes by asking for financial support "so that we can continue to offer a Home for the Aged in the finest of Jewish tradition to all regardless of their financial status".

Early returns have been most gratifying, says Chairman Grossman. Contributions from all sectors of the community have started to come in, signifying understanding and concern on the part of a wide cross-section of Jews in Ottawa. Mr. Grossman is confident the goal will be attained.

The Lodge was officially opened in October, 1965 primarily through the efforts of its Founder, Mrs. Dora Lithwick, co-founders Samuel Berger and Jackie Horwitz and a group of committed individuals. It started with twenty-nine beds. In 1973, a third floor and an additional nineteen beds were added for a total of forty-eight. The Home is full and a waiting list exists.

In order to provide round-the-clock supervisory care, Hillel Lodge employs thirty-one full-time and twenty part-time staff, including nurses, aides, orderlies, kitchen, recreational, housekeeping and administrative personnel.

Testing the new whirlpool bath at Hillel Lodge

Total costs for 1980 were $638,000. Total income from fees, government grants, U.J.A. subsidies and donations came to $573,000., leaving a deficit for the year of $65,000. Deficits incurred in previous years have brought that total to more than $100,000. The interest burden is a tremendous drain on the Lodge's limited resources and the debt must be retired as quickly as possible if Hillel is to become a viable operation.

Originally conceived as a facility for the ambulatory well-aged who could not live alone, services of all kinds had to be added as the residents became older and required additional nursing and other supportive care. The inflationary factor has also escalated costs to record proportions.

Hillel Lodge is administered by a board of twenty-nine. The names of the officers and directors for 1981-82 follow: Immediate Past President, Dr. M. Ralph Berke; Co-Presidents, Dan Doctor and Theodore P. Metrick; First Vice-President, Sylvia Goldblatt; Second Vice-President, M. Sidney Green; Treasurer, Dennis Newton; Recording Secretary, Maynard Kriger; Corresponding Secretary, Gdalyah Rosenfeld; Special Funding Chairman, (Continued on Page 2)

Vaad Report

by Sol B. Shinder
President, Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir
Jewish Community Council

Three Wise Men

A few weeks ago, at the Yom Ha'Atzmaut celebration, I remarked that we are free Jews, in a free society and that we have no problem of dual loyalty. The support of Israel was perfectly compatible with Canadian citizenship, for both countries are founded upon the freedom of the individual in a democratic society.

Following that remark, a member of our community approached me and thanked me for stating it publicly. It is a principle in which I firmly believe. There are three prominent Canadian Jews who I believe are perfect examples that there should never be any question of divided loyalty.

David Lewis, C.C.

The passing of David Lewis has removed from the Canadian scene a towering advocate for the individual rights and freedoms long before it was fashionable to do so. David Lewis rose to the heights of political stature as the national leader of one of our national political parties. One did not have to support the policies of the N.D.P. to have sympathy for the principles which David Lewis espoused.

The fact that David Lewis was a Jew may have slowed Mr. Lewis' path to the leadership of his party but did not and could not stop him. It says much for the acceptance of Jews in our society that David Lewis was able to attain the leadership. David Lewis has never obscured the fact that he was a Jew — it was a distinction of which he was proud and it was a fact which made all other Jews in Canada proud as well.

We, in Ottawa, have been fortunate to have had David and Sophie Lewis live within our midst — we will miss David Lewis for he was always available to the community when organizations called upon him to share some of his wisdom.

Bora Laskin, P.C., C.C.

The Right Honourable Bora Laskin, the Chief Justice of Canada, will be honoured on June 17 by the Canadian Friends of the Weizmann Institute of Science at a national dinner to establish a chair in his honour for Science Teaching at the Institute.

The Chief Justice has had a distinguished career in the academic and judicial world in Canada and has attained the highest judicial position in our country. The appointment of Chief Justice Laskin to his present position is an event which years ago would not have taken place because he is a Jew. The fact that he was so appointed is again testimony to the acceptance of Jews in society. The Chief Justice has fulfilled his role as the foremost jurist in Canada with a distinction which will enshrine him forever in Canadian history. His years as a law professor helped shape the lives of countless law students — all of whom still revere him and remember their days in his classroom with fondness.

The Chief Justice is a proud Jew — one of my most memorable moments was a little over a year ago at the dedication of the Holocaust Memorial when he gave the dedication address. That dedication was one of the most moving and inspiring speeches I have ever been privileged to hear.

The Chief Justice has not avoided his heritage and has supported Israeli institutions at every opportunity. He sees no conflict between being a Jewish Canadian who supports Israel.

Lawrence Freiman, O.C.

On June 24, at our Annual Meeting, the Gilbert Greenberg Distinguished Service Award will be presented to Lawrence Freiman.

Mr. Freiman is a native Ottawa and for years was the driving force behind all that took place in the Ottawa Jewish community. No event would occur without the input of Lawrence. From 1944-46 he served as President of the Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir. It was during his presidency that the rule that a President could only serve for two consecutive years was first introduced. That rule has stood the test of time and provided Ottawa with a succession of lay leaders that has been the envy of other Canadian Jewish communities. Mr. Freiman was the founding chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and he single-handedly pulled all the conflicting groups together at a time when independent campaigns were the rule rather than the exception. Our Jewish community would not be the organized disciplined place it is today were it not for Lawrence Freiman. He did not give up his dedication to the well-being of the community after he left the high offices he held, for he was always available to each successive president of the Vaad.

One of the first people who offered me their support and guidance upon my taking up the office of President of the Vaad was Lawrence Freiman, an offer which I readily accepted.

Lawrence Freiman's support of Israel and Zionism are legend for he was the National President of the Zionist Organization of Canada. He was instrumental in getting an Israeli Ambassador to Ottawa and in finding "Kinneret" the official residence of Israeli Ambassadors in Rockcliffe.

Lawrence Freiman had a successful business career and rose to national prominence in the Arts Community in Canada. He was proud of his Jewish background and it did not interfere with his successful business and public career.

Each of these men were prominent in their field — each were proud Jews — and proud Canadians. They are perfect examples that no matter what field they were involved in, politics, public service or business, their identity as a Jew has not inhibited or deterred their success. They have not exhibited any ambivalence in their support of Israel and their roles as prominent Canadians.

Each of the lives of David Lewis, Bora Laskin and Lawrence Freiman provides a lesson for all of us to be proud of our heritage and for each of us to continue our efforts to sustain the preservation of that heritage.

Postscript

This column represents the last (other than the Annual Report) which I shall have the privilege of writing as the President of the Vaad (the "Vaadfather" as many have called me). The task has been a happy one but not one without its perils. Coming up with a topic every two weeks was the most difficult part of the job. I have not made the life of the Editor of the Bulletin easy for I have always been late with my copy and it was always scribbled in my illegible writing. I wish to thank Cindy Engel, our able editor, for her patience (actually she has no choice for that is one of the privileges of the President).

I will miss these columns and I hope that I have provided some food for thought for those of you who took the trouble of reading my rambling thoughts. Shalom!

LORRY'S CORNER

This year's Walk for Israel was a smashing success, thanks to a super job by Chairman Ben Greenberg, his energetic and enthusiastic committee and all those who walked, jogged or biked. Even the weather co-operated beautifully. The sun was shining and the temperature was just right as Herb Gray, Minister of Trade and Commerce and I cut the ribbon at 9:00 o'clock in the morning to send the participants on their way.

The statistics are equally impressive. Almost 500 registered for the event — by far the largest percentage completed the 18 km. scenic route, with the bikers tripling that distance. Over $42,000. was raised in pledges, a whopping $15,000. more than last year.

Our Walkathon collection record is especially good and we expect to have the bulk of the money in hand by the end of June. The Early Bird Draw for a 10-speed bicycle has helped. We are also giving prizes to the leading producers, master walkers, youngest walkers, largest number of sponsors and to young adults, teens and under 13's who led their peers. The Hebrew Schools were most co-operative with students from each group walking together under banners they designed especially for the occasion. The school with the largest number of participants will be recognized as will the class in each of the schools which brought out the largest numbers of children. The names of all of our winners will be announced in the next issue of this Bulletin.

Aside from all the good fun, the camaraderie, the clowns and entertainment along the way, the hot dogs and the music, the cause is right. When it is all over, the chasing after sponsors, the blisters and the job of collecting pledges will have been worthwhile. This year's proceeds will go for work with disadvantaged youth in Israel and every walker or sponsor can derive satisfaction from the knowledge that he or she has helped.

Ben Greenberg and his associates introduced a number of innovative ideas including the Company of Chai and the Group of 100. Ben wants to build on that experience because he feels that we have really only begun to scratch the surface of the potential of the program. I am delighted he has decided to take the chairmanship for a second year. He is extremely well-organized and believe it or not, has already begun to plan for and recruit his team for the 1982 event scheduled for Sunday morning, May 16.

As of June 4, the day this issue of the Bulletin went to press, total pledges reached $1,800,000. or 81.8% of the commitments obtained last year. On the other hand, $1.8 million is 75% of our $2.4 million goal for 1981. On a card-for-card comparison basis we are running about 5% ahead. All things considered, this is not too bad. If we maintain the pace, (frankly I see no reason why we should not) we should end up with about $2.3 million.

The immediate problem is getting the rest of the cards in. Of the 5,850 prospects on our list, 4,366 have been covered, leaving 1,616 still in the field. Reports indicate that at least half have been contacted and that the cards are enroute to our office. In terms of coverage, we are well ahead of last year but the campaign cannot be considered finished until every one of the remaining 800 potential donors is seen. Please canvassers, let's go! We can't afford the luxury of losing even one contribution.

In the next few weeks, I will step down as Chairman of U.J.A., after a two-year stint, and this column will give way to another by my successor. I chose a caricature rather than a photograph for Lorry's Corner because I felt it would be a better attention-getter. I think I was right. The impression I get is that the column has been read and may have contributed something to a better understanding of the campaign, its beneficiaries and the personalities who make it tick.

Hy Hochberg and I collaborate on the column. We meet in advance, decide on the items to be stressed and he does the writing. We have a last-minute look at the results and then it is put to bed.

Hy and I got together as usual in preparation for this issue of the paper. The directions were clear enough for the body of the article but we were stuck momentarily on how to end. Finally, I said to him, "Let's leave them with a smile — enough of the heavy stuff". He responded by saying "Sorry Lorry, no smiles 'til the cards are in". He may be right. What do you say, folks? Let's finish the job and then we can smile together with the knowledge that we have had a successful and productive campaign.

Lorry Greenberg,
General Chairman, 1981 United Jewish Appeal

Commentary by Cynthia Engel Editor

The covers are off the swimming pools...

The charcoal is on the barbecue...

And week after glorious week, in synagogues across the city and across the land, a small army of pubescent young boys standing on the threshold of manhood square the shoulders beneath the jackets of their brand new suits, take a deep breath and before an expectant congregation, stand up to be counted in as responsible Jewish adults: 'Tis the season to be...Bar Mitzvah!

And week after week, miniature ladies, having finally mastered the art of walking in their first pair of real heel shoes, bow before the Ark of the Covenant and in clear, sweet tones sing out the Haftorah, and in so doing accept the mantle of first maturity. Or, together with their peers, they stand in front of assembled family and friends to share the in Bat Torah experience as a group. For it is also Bas Mitzvah time!

Regardless whether the affair is lavish or low key, two things remain unalterably true: the day is one filled with tradition and meaning for all who are a part of it — from the Principles to the Lowest Guest on the list...

any one of these children, observed on the Monday morning following the simcha, in no way remotely bears even the slightest resemblance to the kempt, meticulously groomed, thoroughly presentable young adult who so confidently graced the bimah on the Shabbat a scant two days before! So it has always been, so it shall be forevermore.

And despite the fact that the gift is of paramount importance, and the outfit is a major concern, and the evening "do" (or lack thereof) is a worry, we have somehow managed to keep things in their proper perspective. For while the Bar/Bas Mitzvah affords the opportunity to throw a party on a grand or modest scale, the real reason for the celebration remains uppermost in the minds and hearts of all who join in the revelry: another Jew, another Jewess, has made a commitment to Judaism.

Though these children are still very young — just brushing thirteen — they cover a good part of the road to maturity in the years leading up to Their Big Moment. For this commitment, this acceptance of the Torah, demands of each of them a tremendous amount of self-discipline in its preparation.

It represents precious time given over to study and practice, rehearsal and repetition. It represents months and months spent poring over Hebrew words and phrases...months and months humming snatches of the ancient Hebraic melody...and months and months of holding up in a bedroom with just a tape recorder for a friend. It is the culmination of a great deal of work, a great deal of self-denial. It is indeed a commitment.

Bar Mitzvahs and Bas Mitzvahs-happily-occur throughout all the months of the year. But with the delightful prospect of a season at camp, spring and summer are always fair bursting with the joy of this simcha.

Each Bar Mitzvah boy, each Bas Mitzvah girl, makes a covenant with Judaism on that special day. And it is done with the whole heart. With luck, that commitment will last for all days of their lives.

Rating Interest Rates

by Rabbi Dr. Basil Herring
Congregation Beth Shalom

Even elevators, so they say, have their ups and downs! Yet interest rates seem to be having only "ups", as soaring rates become a fixed fixture of the economic landscape. As a Rabbi, whose supposed expertise lies elsewhere, I claim no special insight into the problem, yet it is true that the tradition has something to say in this regard.

The Torah says "if you sell something, you shall not exploit each other, but you shall reckon it according to the years and crops left until the jubilee." (Lev. 25) This is the prohibition of ona'ah, of overcharging for an item, if the price is more than one sixth the real value of the item. Yet, according to the tradition, this prohibition does not apply to the sale of a home or real estate. There the sky is the limit, whatever the market will bear. But if this is the case, then the question is, what do the above-quoted verses refer to, formulated as they are in terms of a land deal and its agricultural produce?

One answer is provided by the Ramban in the 13th century. He explains that while the Torah does not limit the selling price, the Torah is concerned for the return on investment of both the buyer and the seller. Hence the Torah insists that the buyer understand clearly how many crops can be harvested before the land has to be returned to its original owner according to the law of the Jubilee or 50 year cycle. For either party to exact an exorbitant profit over the course of the years, represents the central injustice that the Torah wishes to avoid — for that is exploitation and unfair advantage. Why is this so?

A logical answer is provided by Rabbi Efrayim Luntschitz in the 17th century: he says that land has no fixed value, unlike movables which have a limited life expectancy and usefulness. Land values generally appreciate over the course of time. As Ecclesiastes says "land is forever" — it does not wear out or go away. Hence a house or land that might be overpriced today, could tomorrow become a bargain, and if not tomorrow, then perhaps in 20 or 30 years time. But that is only the case if that price is not multiplied beyond reason within a short time by virtue of skyhigh interest rates. In that case the investment is no investment — it is a gamble, or a dead loss.

It is in this context that we can appreciate the record profits recently reported by banks and lending institutions, profits that are up by over 60% on average. Of course banks are entitled to profits, but it is difficult to justify such figures when it is based on monies collected from people who bought their homes at lower rates, without any way of knowing that we would be experiencing such rates today. Should banks be free to exploit the present economic climate to the detriment of their customers, to chalk up record profit margins? I would think not!

Recently we have been hearing of the soaring number of families who simply give up in the struggle to make their payments, thereby permitting the banks to repossess their homes. What an ironing twist to the Biblical idea of the Jubilee year! Whereas the Jubilee required that the land return to its original owners after 50 years, something designed to facilitate social equality and justice, so there would not be an ever-widening gap between rich and poor, avoiding the endless cycle of poverty — what we see today is precisely the opposite. Today those who must pay sink ever deeper into debt, while the rich are paid bountifully for their interest-bearing wealth. And so the rich get richer, while the poor get poorer, some to be forced into losing their homes. Whatever happened to the Jubilee and the Biblical notions of social justice?

What we have here is, in any case, is yet another illustration of the significance of the Torah and its commentaries for our time. Our society and ourselves would do well to consult Jewish tradition for insight and guidance — and let us as Jews be proud!

Tribute to Natan Lewin

Natan Lewin has taught for the Ottawa Talmud Torah Board for almost 30 years.

He began his teaching career at Hillel Academy. After many years of dedicated service to that institution, Mr. Lewin assumed teaching responsibilities at the Talmud Torah Afternoon School. Here he has succeeded in instilling in his students a true feeling for Torah learning, particularly in the areas of Tefillah and Chumash. As well he has been able to encourage, through the establishment of special classes, many students who encountered difficulties. Under his tutelage they were able to succeed in their studies.

On Tuesday, June 16, the Ottawa Talmud Torah Afternoon School and the Ottawa Talmud Torah Board will honour Mr. Natan Lewin for his many years of devoted teaching in the Ottawa Jewish Community. This tribute will take place at the Agudath Israel Synagogue as part of the Graduation and Closing Exercises of the Talmud Torah Afternoon School.

Friends and alumni of Hillel Academy and Talmud Torah Afternoon School are encouraged to attend this tribute to Mr. Natan Lewin.

You are cordially invited to attend the Graduation and Closing Exercises of the Talmud Torah Afternoon School Tuesday, June 16, 1981 14 Sivan 5741 7:30 p.m. Agudath Israel Synagogue 1400 Coldrey Avenue A reception tendered by the parents of the Graduates and the Afternoon School Parents Association will follow.

Golden Agers enjoy an active schedule

On Monday, May 11, approximately 150 members of the Golden Age Club and guests celebrated Mothers' Day with a special luncheon co-sponsored by the Jewish Social Services Agency of Ottawa-Carleton.

A varied program was presented. Eva Honigman read an original poem. Sadie Silverman led the monthly celebration of birthdays and expressed special congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. George Goldberg on the occasion of their 52nd wedding anniversary. President Marcia Bordelay presented Mother of the Year Miriam Bordelay with a certificate of donation made in her honour to Hillel Lodge.

Guest speaker for the afternoon was Rabbi Reuven Bulka.

The festivities concluded with a musical program presented by Reuben Lightstone.

Special thanks to Fine's Flowers for the lovely flowers which were presented to each lady who attended the afternoon.

On Wednesday, May 20 members of the Good Luck Club of Montreal were welcomed at a luncheon prepared by the J.C.C. Golden Age Club. Larry Szpirglas, Executive Director of the J.C.C. and Myra Aronson, President of the National Council of Jewish Women, brought greetings on behalf of their respective organizations.

Entertainment for the afternoon was provided by singers Harry Sherman and Mr. J. Jackson, and the George Goldberg Trio.

On Monday, May 25, a busload of Golden Age Club members toured the Experimental Farm and Rockcliffe Park, and viewed Ottawa's magnificent tulips. The group later returned to the J.C.C. where tea was served. Marcia Bordelay and Sadie Silverman gave a report on their recent attendance at the Senior Centres Association of Ontario Eastern Region Conference "Volunteers Fill The Gap."

Rabbi Basil Herring presents Mr. and Mrs. Julian Lewin with an Award of Recognition for their efforts on behalf of Beth Shalom West.

Satellite close to acquiring a site

Sunday evening May 31 saw the launching of Beth Shalom West's second membership drive. A large crowd of members and interested people attended a wine and cheese party at Disco Reflections in the Embassy West Hotel, to celebrate the anniversary of the satellite congregation's founding.

New members were introduced, and a general prospectus of the Congregation's next moves was presented by Dr. Basil Herring, Rabbi of Beth Shalom.

A key announcement of the evening came when Rabbi Herring revealed that concrete steps toward acquisition of a tract of land in the Craig-Henry area have been taken, with the assistance of Jack and Irving Aaron.

Another highlight of the evening was the special Award

Jordan A. Levitin
